ARCHIVAL COLLECTION

INTRODUCTION

We take pleasure in presenting a selection of medical caricatures of the eighteenth to the twentieth centuries from the National Library of Medicine art collections. Among the 288 prints listed are works by such masters as Hogarth and Cruikshank of England, and of Daumier and Boilly of France, and those delightful satires of eminent men of medicine of the late 1800's by the Vanity Fair cartoonists "Imp," "Spy," "Stuff," "Quiz," and others. Collectively, the selection reflects the maladies encountered in the past two hundred years of medical practice. Herein are to be found caricatures on corns and colic, tabes and toothache, charlatans and consultants.

The list is arranged alphabetically by artist; prints whose artists are unknown are listed alphabetically by title or caption following the list of artists. To provide a quick approach to caricatures of interest, we have added a subject index. Black and white photoreproductions of this collection are available at a fee.

Mrs. Judith Myrick gave editorial assistance and typed the manuscript.
